The final irony, Skrentny writes, is that much support for affirmative action was motivated by fear that the Soviet Union would use demonstrable discrimination against blacks as a propaganda tool. The end of the Cold War, he argues, helps explain why affirmative action now appears so vulnerable.

THE IRONIES OF AFFIRMATIVE ACTION | Kirkus Reviews

Affirmative action is objected to because of its racial beneficiary! (p. 63). Likewise, Skrentny argues that "The resistance to or uncomfortable acceptance of racial preferences does not result from the simple application of the rule of color/difference blindness, but from the rejection of an African-American claim for moral worthiness, for the status of being deserving" (p. 236).
