The Rules of Cycling, according to the Velominati - Ride25

RULE: ALWAYS USE HAND SIGNALS. Most states require cyclists to alert others on the road of their intentions. While vehicles are equipped with blinkers and brake lights, cyclists must use hand signals to let those around them know when they're making a turn, stop or lateral movement in the roadway. This helps keep you safe as a cyclist and avoids an unnecessary collision.

Keep within the lane when practicable. When leaving a cycle lane check before pulling out that it is safe to do so and signal your intention clearly to other road users. Use of cycle lanes is not compulsory and will depend on your experience and skills, but they can make your journey safer. 64 You MUST NOT cycle on a pavement.

The illustrations are funny, full of 'in' cycling references, and very well observed. The Rules are empirical - they are The Rules because they are the rules. There is no central body overseeing - the Velominati are merely collecting and curating the way things are in Road Cycling - and what a hoot. You'll be quoting "Rule 5!" to people within ...
