He is ecstatic to join this long line of distinguished fighters, known as the " old breed. " On September 14, after taking part in amphibious-landing exercises, Company K finally embarks for Peleliu, where they will fight the Japanese. On the ship, Sledge chats with a friend, Robert Oswalt, who plans to be a neurosurgeon after the war. Sledge notes that Oswalt was later killed on Peleliu, and concludes gloomily that war has the capacity to destroy the most promising members of society.
